

A SIMPLE SUPER SATURN DAY

WRITTEN BY ANNIE

Hello, my name is Sandy, and I am an alien living on Saturn. Today, it is kind of stormy in the morning, but I think the storm will go away soon.

While I was getting ready, I suddenly heard something. At first, I thought it was my alarm clock, but it was actually the sound of thunder. It was too loud, so I had to cover my ears as I went downstairs.

I ran to my closet to find my earplugs, but they weren't there.

When I turned around
and looked at my desk,
they were right on top
of it.

Who put them there?!

Oh. I did.

Silly me! I forgot.

Once I put my earplugs on, I went to the kitchen table and cooked my food on the stove. I made alien spaghetti with mushrc green groen spagimnn ca.the oiren.

I ate my delicious (and a bit too big) breakfast without brushing my teeth because Saturn aliens don't have to brush their teeth. We just get new ones when the old teeth rot, and rotting teeth don't hurt us.

After I finished my breakfast,
I packed my favorite bag and went off to the bus stop, which has a sign that looks like a triceratops.

I sat on the bench where I often sit and waited for the bus.

After a while, I heard a “THUMP THUMP”—sound coming from the distance—the bus was here! If you want to go on a bus like this, go to the dinosaur world. Buses on Saturn are triceratops!

But suddenly, it ran away! Oh no! My bus! I ran all the way to catch up with the triceratops bus, and phew—I caught it.

Maybe it didn't see the bus stop sign because it was too big. Someone should make that sign bigger than the triceratops bus!

Before long, I saw my school.
I rang the bell (which is holding its tail up), and the bus stopped with a SCREECH.

I put my school card into a slot and gassed through the invisible gate.

As usual, as soon as my teacher saw me, she said, “Sandy! Why did you come late today?” I replied that I missed the bus, even though that was just an excuse. Then she gave me my math book, and I turned to page 123, as she said.

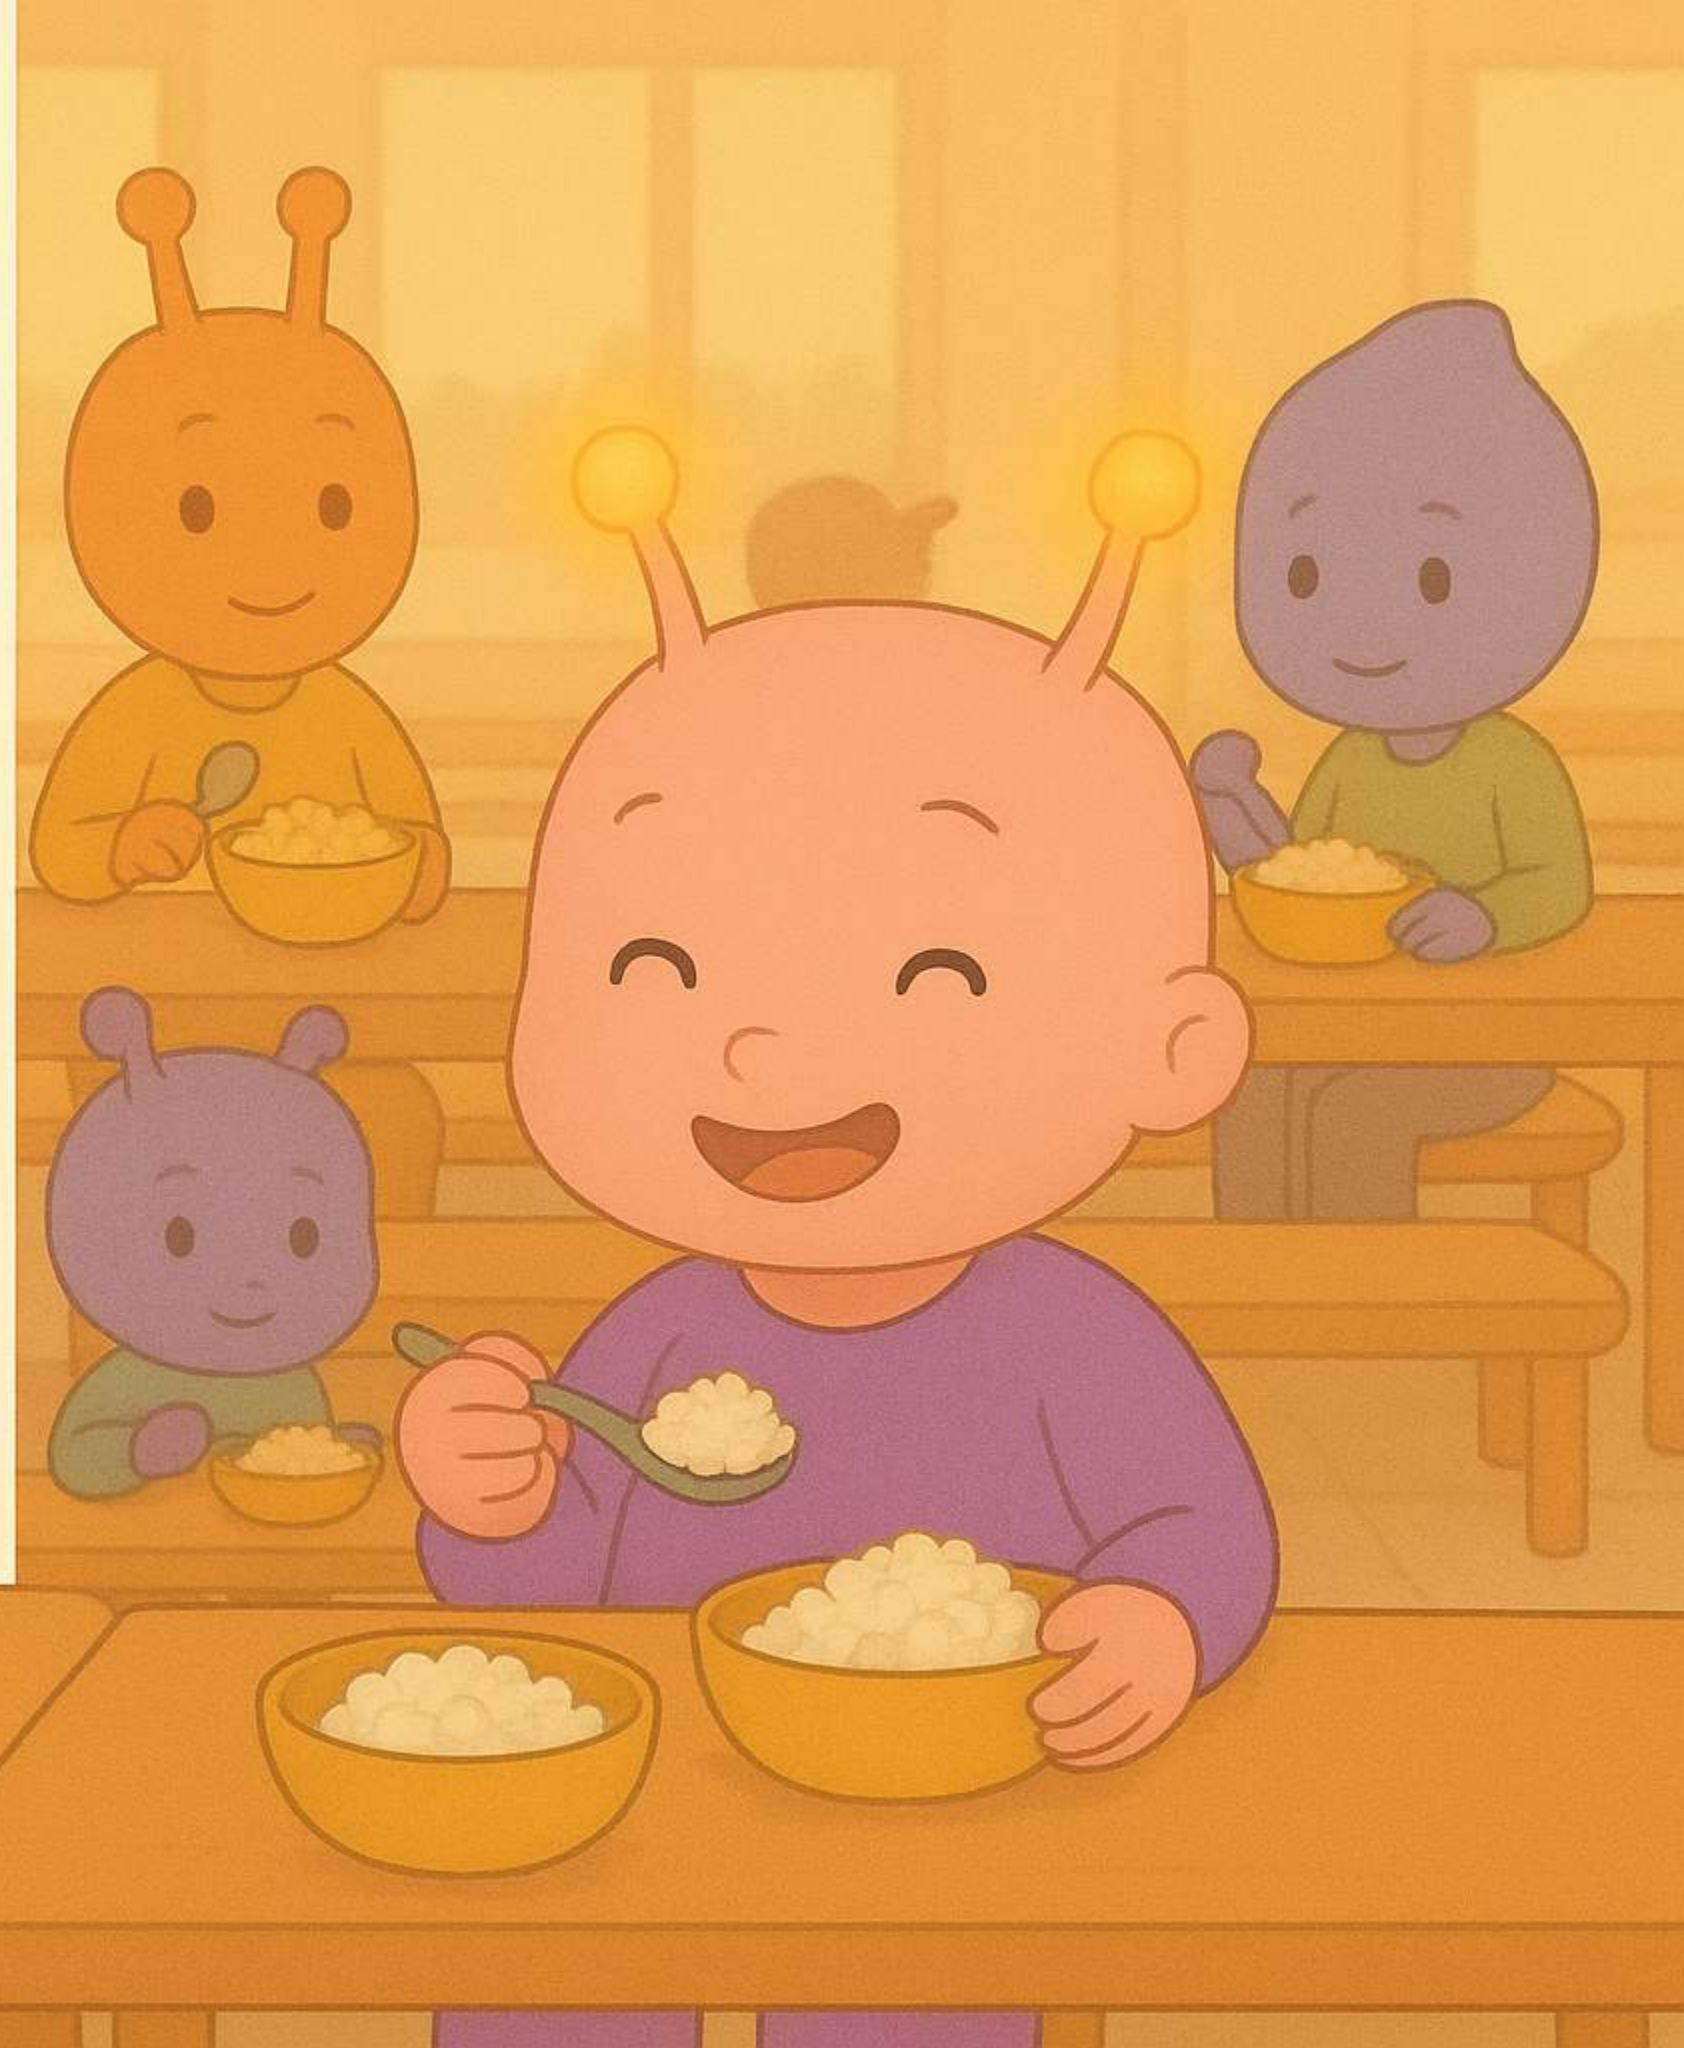

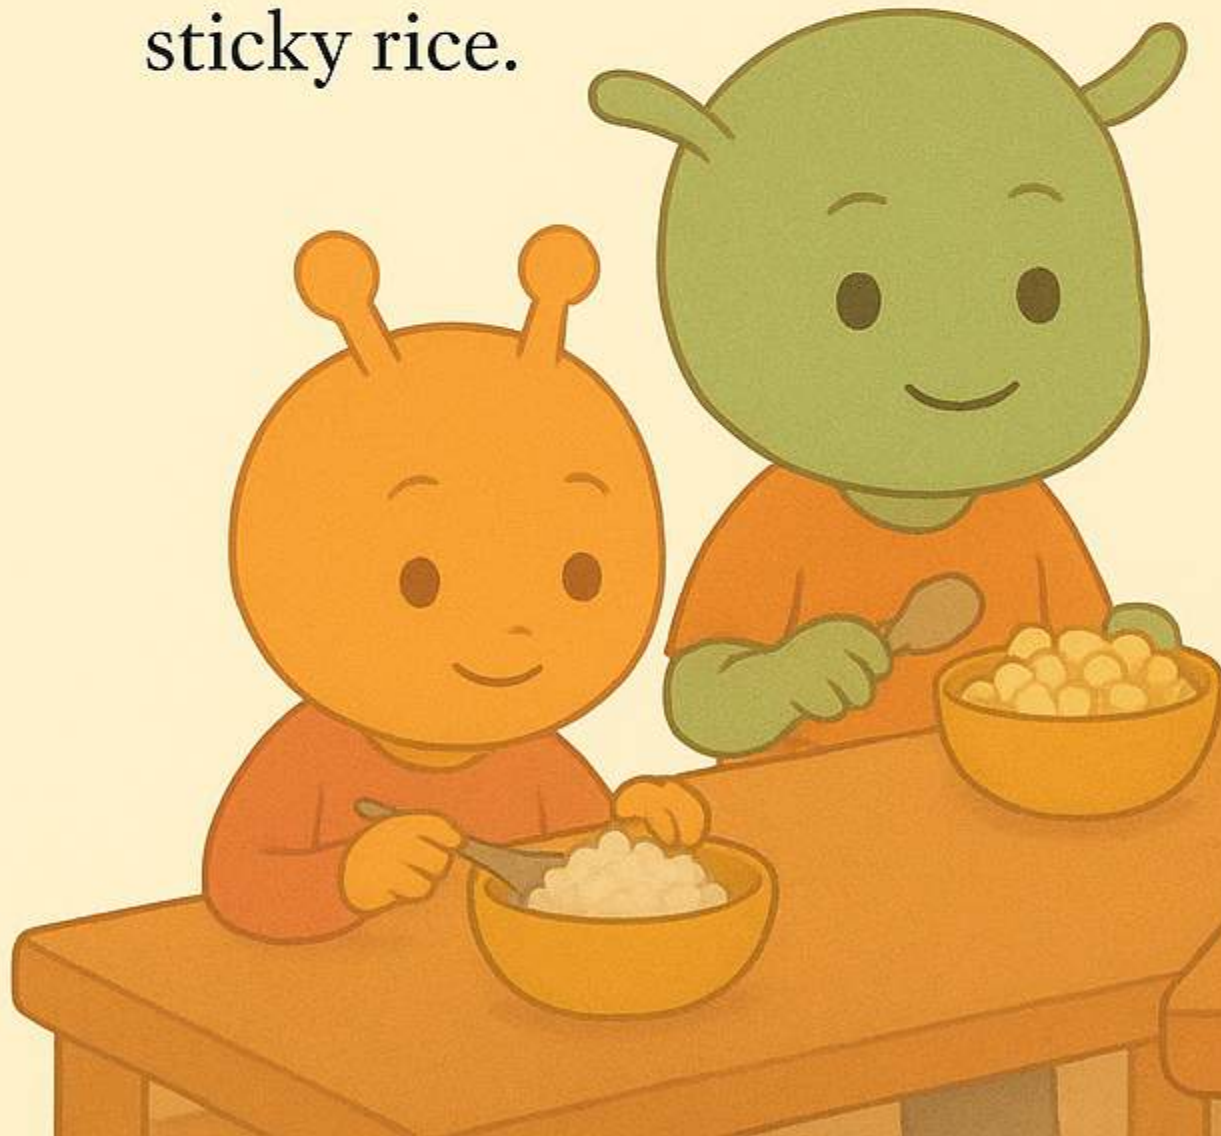

I don't like math—I like English.

So when we finished math and my teacher gave me my English book, I was so happy.

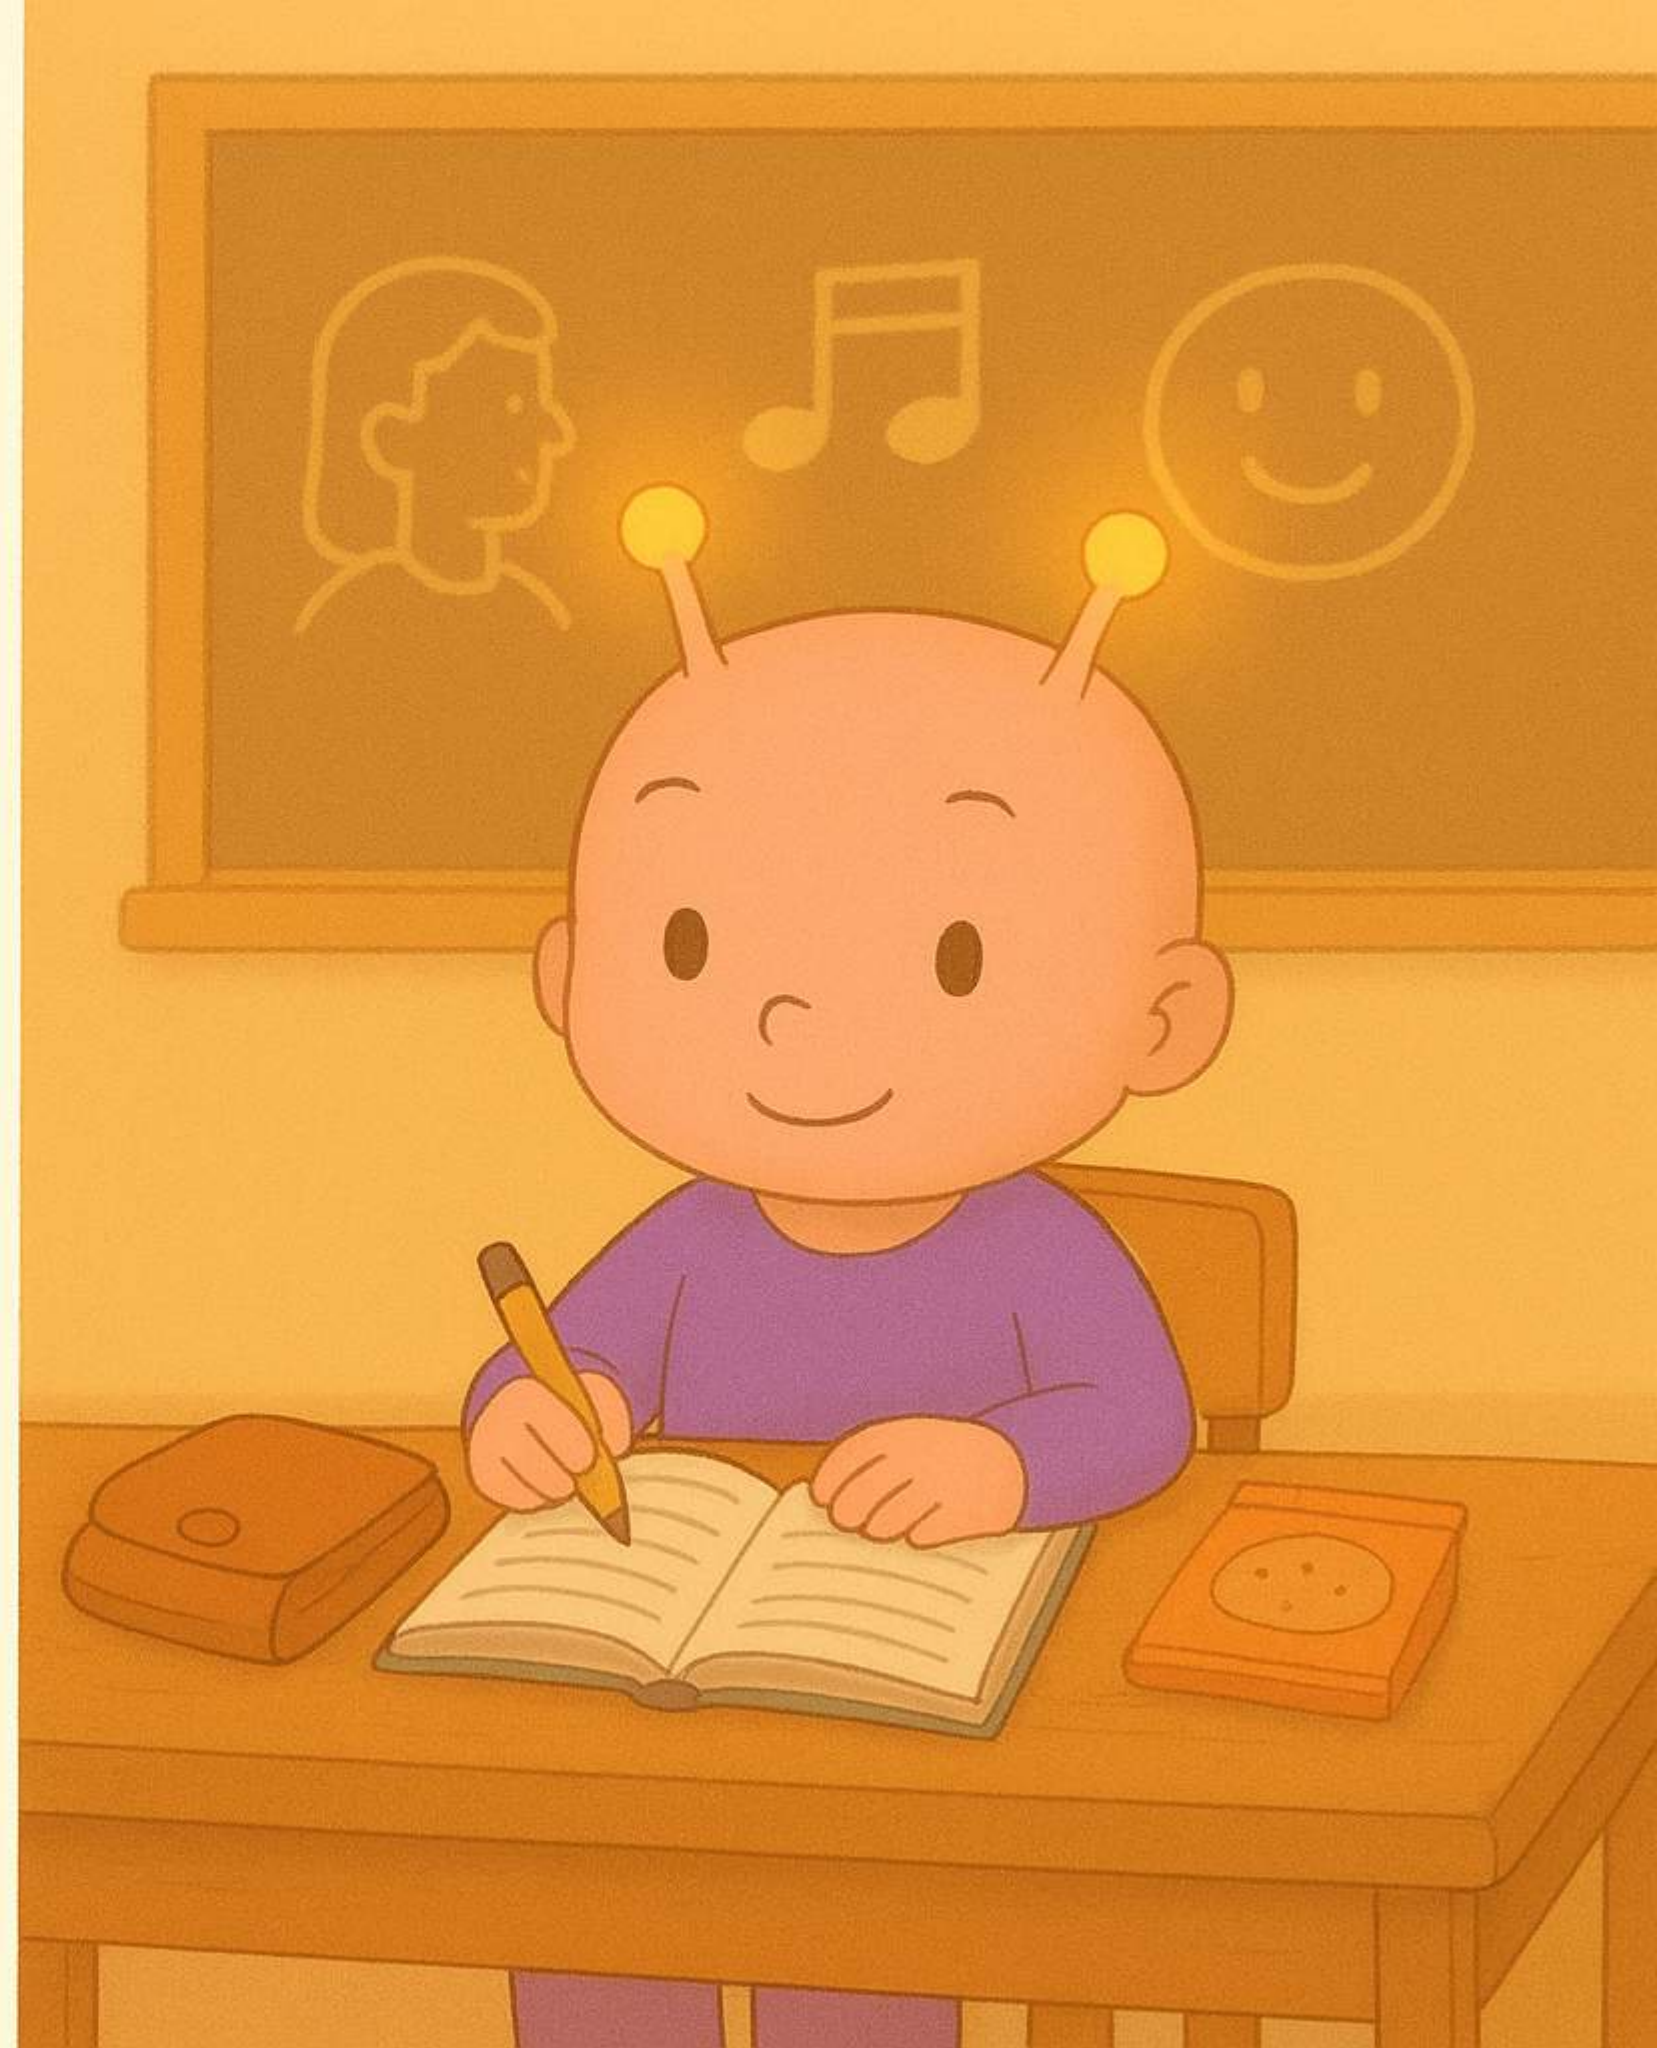

By the time we finished.
English, I was hungry, so our teacher let us go down to the canteen to eat lunch.

Just in time—I was hungry!
We ate potato popcorn and sticky rice.

After lunch, I learned history,
Vietnamese, music, and sports,
and I even got a snack between Vietnamese and music.

When it was five thirty, it was time to go home. I packed my things and went home.

As soon as I got back, I did all my homework. It was super easy, just like kindergarten homework for me. I mean, one of the questions was, “What is $5 + 1$?” How is that supposed to be hard?! I’m six, not four or five. I finished it in almost five minutes.

After that, I had the rest of my time to relax or play.
I chose both!
I played football outside with my friends and then relaxed on my cozy sofa.

Later, I went to my solo singing after-school class. Why is it called solo? We don't always sing so low when we do it. Somebody must have been super weird to choose that name. But well, I like singing solo, despite its name.

After some singing practice, the solo-singing teacher said it was time to go home. Noooo!

Soon after, my mom came to pick me up and drove me to my friend Shandy's house. I get to go there on Mondays, and I love going to Shandy's house!

Do you know why? Because he won the Nobel Prize! Not the normal Nobel Prize on Earth. On Saturn, the Nobel Prize is a prize for people who don't have bells. We Saturn aliens got its name from Earth because "Nobel" sounds like "No-bell."

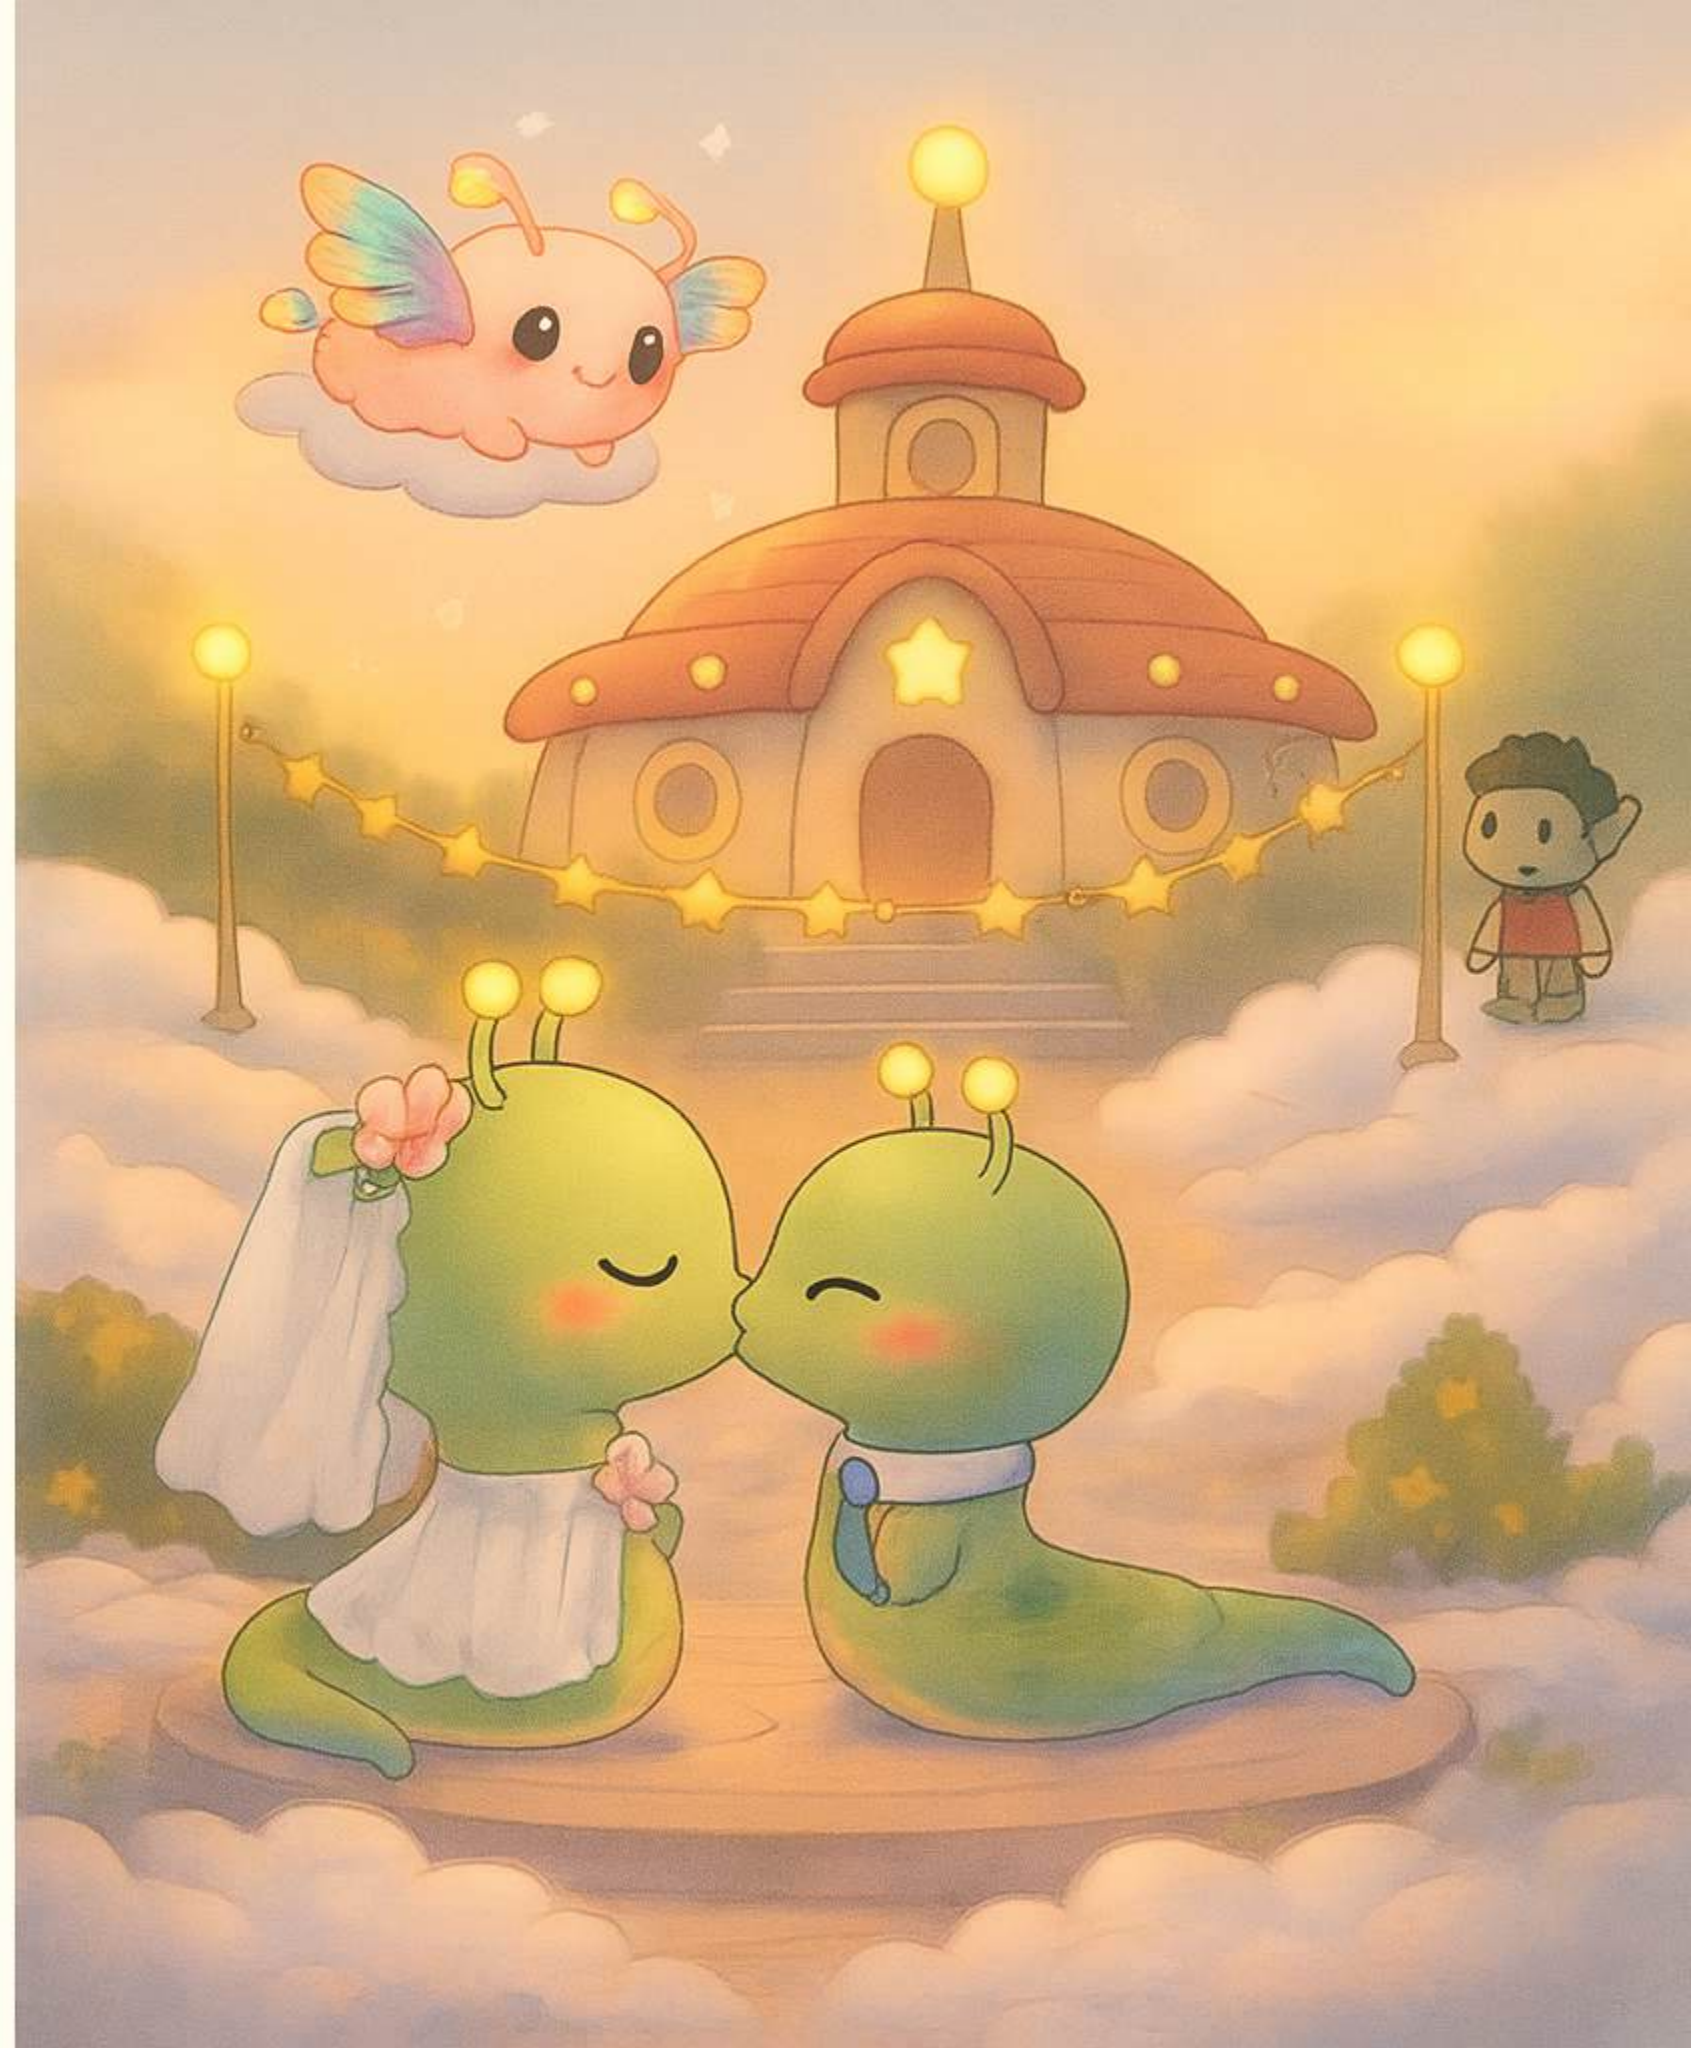

Not long after I arrived, Shandy came out of the bathroom. Of course he was taking a bath – bathroom has the word bath in it.

As soon as he got out, he went to his room and came back with his clothes on.

He said, “Last weekend, I see snakes kissing.”

What?! No way! Someone will see a snake kissing when pigs fly. Have you ever seen a snake so how could I see one kissing?

Suddenly, something started ringing. I asked Shandy if he had an alarm clock, but he said no. He also said the ringing sound was the bell. When I opened the door, my mom was there! Noooo! I wanted to play more!

Back home, I opened the pot in the fridge to get my dinner, because my mom always puts my dinner there. But when I reached inside the pot, I pulled out my alarm clock instead!

It turns out my mom put my alarm clock into the pot
instead of the eggs
She gave me a chocolate bar
to apologize.

Yay! Today is the best day ever! She gave me a whole chocolate bar—an enormous one!

After finishing it, my mom sent me to bed. Noooo! I don't like going to bed! I want to play! However, in my room there is nothing except my bed. My other things are outside, and if I go outside, my mom will scold me. So there is nothing else for me to do except sleep. So goodbye! Zzzzz...
